What is the Colorado Combined Campaign?

The Colorado Combined Campaign (CCC) is Colorado state government's official employee giving program. The state established the campaign in 1987 as a beneficial way for employees to easily and efficiently donate to a wide array of nonprofits and support their communities. Since then, state employees have raised more than $35 million through the CCC for Colorado charities.

How does donating through the CCC work?

State employees are empowered to give and in charge of it. Each year, they can choose from 400-500 Colorado nonprofits that represent more than 20 different causes and every corner of the state. Charities apply to participate and are vetted to ensure the highest levels of legal and regulatory compliance. State employees also choose how to give, whether through payroll contribution (a few dollars each month) or other options. There is no minimum donation.

Who can participate?

The CCC is a benefit of employment for all state agency employees, and employees of state colleges and universities. It was created by executive order and has been endorsed by every Colorado governor since.

What is the benefit of making a donation through the CCC?

The CCC enables state employees to donate directly out of their paychecks, in whatever amounts they like. This automatic, incremental giving allows most employees to give more than otherwise might be possible. Additionally, nonprofits can keep their administrative costs lower if they're processing a single, large payment from the CCC versus multiple, smaller payments from individual donors. Also, recurring giving creates a sustained form of funding that helps nonprofits year-round.
